Gaylor's Ranking Grows in 2010 Book of Lists

Charlotte, NC – November 30, 2010 – Gaylor jumped two spots in the industry focused 2010 Book of Lists compiled by the Charlotte Business Journal. In 2009, Gaylor's Charlotte, North Carolina office placed fifth on the list. Newly ranked as the area's third largest electrical contractor, branch manager George Haufler credits his staff citing expertise and concern for clients as key reasons Gaylor continues to grow and prosper in a tough economic climate.

“Our clients trust us. From the bidding process, through the design phase and on to the construction of the project and its completion, our professionals cater to our customers,” said Haufler. “Our electricians are extensively trained to build any electrical infrastructure regardless of the complexity and will readily answer customers requests with applicable strategies to achieve their goals.”

According to Haufler, hands-on knowledge, personal attention to detail, cost-saving solutions and determination to get every job finished on time, has boosted Gaylor's reputation within the organization and outside the company.

“We are honored to have a place on this list and will continue to strive to be the best electrical contractor in the industry even during challenging times.”

Gaylor is committed to the electrical industry's highest standards of professional integrity, performance, and cost effective services for the benefit of its clients. Since its inception in 1984, Gaylor has grown to become the most widely respected electrical contractor in the nation. Gaylor is governed by core values including safety, diversity, education, employees and relationships.
